

Tire Casualties

Corpl. Bernard L. Arshop, Indianapolis, on duty at an ordnance collecting point near Nancy, France, looks at one of the many tires damaged in combat that cannot be repaired.

A carload of more than 500 tires is ready to leave a combat zone for reclamation in rear area depots. Many of them will be back on the road, provided vitally needed materials for recapping are available.

German planes strafed this jeep, and Sergt. Bob Burns, Pampa, Tex., holds the shattered remains of two tires. Tire casualties on the western front are extremely high.

Thousands of military tires, worn in use or damaged in combat, await repair or retreading. Signal Corps Photos.
